Week 3, April 2019

1 What do I want to learn or understand better?

Since we will start coding this weekend I hope to develop a basic programming knowledge in React within the next sprint. I also hope to learn more about applying Scrum since it is essential for the way we will work within the project in the continuation.

2 How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

When we will start working with the different user stories I think that I will be able to take part in deciding what different tasks should belong to the user story in question. I also think that I will be a good product owner based on my ability of seeing what could be of customer value and not.

3 What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

My contribution to the use of Scrum for this last week was to take part in our discussion regarding how to apply Scrum properly now that we will start coding. We decided to divide the product (story) owner role and the scrum master role within the different user stories, so everyone has a such responsibility in one or more of the user stories.

4 What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week my contribution to the team deliveries has consisted of taking part in team discussions and decisions regarding the projects progress. One part of it was to discuss and design our product backlog with its epics, user stories and the estimated effort. Another part was to decide what the next sprint should contain and what teams we wanted to start developing code in. I have felt like I could contribute to most parts of this in one way or another, especially to finding user stories of value.
