What I want to learn and understand better

We have now decided that we will be doing the project in React. It is a completely new language for me, so the first step in learning will be watching the tutorial on Reacts homepage and downloading and installing the right software. Moreover, I want to get comfortable with basic commands in React during the next week to give myself better presumptions to contribute to the groups work.

How I can learn someone else something new

Just as before, I hope to contribute with an alternative perspective on the business opportunities from the platform than the majority of the group. I am also hoping to contribute with a structured way of working, as well as a positive attitude to the challenges that we face.

My contribution towards the teams use of Scrum

Since we haven't begun that phase yet it's hard to evaluate. From next week I want to contribute by taking part in defining clear user stories and make sure we work in a structured way. Also, I want to be attentive and notice things that we can improve.

My contribution towards the final team delivery

I have contributed in discussing layout and function of the platform. Also, I have taken part in defining the business model canvas and explaining its parts to other group members.
